MARYLAND GAZETTE,

Containing the freſheſt Advices, Foreign and Domeſtic.

WEDNESDAY, Auguſt 10, 1748.

BERLIN, May 1.

FRIDAY laſt arrived here the honourable Henry Legge, Eſq; his Britannick majeſty's envoy extraordinary and plenipotentiary to this court, and this day had an audience of his Pruſſian majeſty, and delivered his credentials.

Genoa, April 13. The troops keep quiet in their quarters, and nothing of conſequence happens on the frontiers. Within theſe few days we have received 900 men from Barcelona, being part of the regiment of Ulſter in the Spaniſh ſervice.

Leghorn, April 13. Our advices from Corſica ſay, that the malecontents increaſe in number daily, thro' the hopes given them of being ſupported by a body of Auſtrian and Piedmonteſe troops.

Rome, April 23. We are aſſured, that, at the requeſt of the holy See, the miſſionaries will have liberty to go and exerciſe their zeal, under certain reſtrictions, in all the Pruſſian dominions. There is ſaid to be a negociation actually upon the tapis betwixt this court and that of Venice, relative to their reſpective intereſts at the approaching congreſs.

Extract of a letter from London (inſerted in the Utrecht Gazette) dated April 13.

"The courts of Vienna and Turin having repreſented by their miniſters here, that without an augmentation of ſubſidies, it was impoſſible to execute ſucceſsfully the military operations in Italy, the king's miniſters having lately ſigned a new convention on this head, with baron Weſnar, miniſter plenipotentiary from the empreſs queen, and the chevalier Oſſorio, envoy extraordinary from the king of Sardinia; by which convention his majeſty has engaged to advance the ſum of 130,000 l. ſterling, viz. 110,000 for the enterprize againſt the ſtates of Genoa, and 20,000 for the expedition againſt Corſica. Colonel Plunket is gone to Vienna with this convention, which the chevalier Oſſorio, has alſo ſent to Turin by expreſs. As ſoon as her Imperial majeſty's and the king of Sardinia's ratifications arrive here, the court will remit the ſaid ſum of 130,000 l. to lieutenant general Sinclair in Italy, who is to lay it out in ſuch manner, as may beſt anſwer the end for which it is granted."

Milan, April 20. Count Coloredo, lieutenant general, arrived here laſt week from Vienna, and immediately proceeded to Pavia, to deliver to count Brown, general in chief, the empreſs queen's ultimate orders about the operations of the campaign. The troops are in motion on every ſide: The infantry march towards the ſtate of Genoa; and the horſe are ordered into the dutchy of Modena, as not being fit for the ſervice in the mountains.

Turin, April 20. General Sinclair, miniſter plenipotentiary from the king of Great Britain, is waited for here with the utmoſt impatience, becauſe we cannot ſettle, 'till his arrival, the operations of the campaign, particularly the intended expedition againſt Corſica, which is proviſionally ſuſpended.

Vienna, April 27. Some People pretend that the conferences between the Pope's nuncio and our miniſtry, related to the dutchy of Ferrara, which the court of Rome ſeems to be mightily afraid of loſing, it being rumoured that France deſtines it for the duke of Modena. The Pope ſeems to be likewiſe jealous of the power of the king of Sardinia, and very ready to ſeize any opportunity to obſtruct his farther aggrandizement.

Breda, May 6. It is certain that the council of war is to be tranſmitted hither; and a Report prevails, that a certain general officer will be made an example for his ill conduct upon a well known occaſion, by having his head ſtruck off in the ſight of the whole army.

Extract of a letter from an authentick perſon at Paris to a foreign miniſter at the Hague, April 23.

The arreſt of M. de la Salle at Dantzick continues to make a great noiſe here, and at Verſailles. The miniſtry exclaim loudly againſt the tranſaction, and ſeem to be touched to the quick with it. This affair is likely to be carried to ſuch a length by the court of France, according to what is ſaid of it at the count de Maurepa's office, that orders will probably be given to ſeize upon all Dantzick ſhips that ſhall be found in the ports of France. 'Tis true, this will not alter the affair at all; but by the French court's ſhewing in this manner its reſentment, other petty ſtates, &c. would be intimidated from doing any thing that might give umbrage to his moſt Chriſtian majeſty. The marquis des Iſſarts, the French ambaſſador at Dreſden, has juſt informed the marquis de Puyſieux, that M. de la Salle will be carried from Dantzick into the Ruſſian dominions, in order to be tried there for the crimes laid to his charge; and that the requiſitorials from Peterſburg are only wanting for the carrying off this priſoner, if not by conſent, by force. According to what we are informed here from the moſt credible perſons, and thoſe moſt likely to know, M. de la Salle is charged with having negociated in the north for ſeveral men of war for the ſervice of France, and with forming a confederacy againſt the march of the Ruſſians, between the courts of Berlin, Saxony, and Poland, to whom thoſe of Bavaria, Palatine, Wirtemberg, &c. were to have joined. This commiſſion likewiſe extended to form a party at the court of Peterſburg, which might get the upper hand of, and ſuperiority to that of the courts of Vienna and Great Britain: In which commiſſions, it is believed here, this ſame colonel de la Salle would certainly have ſucceeded, by the extraordinary intelligence he had from the north, if he had not obſtinately and ſtupidly blunder'd into Dantzick, againſt the advice of certain people, who told him, that the magiſtrates of that city had orders to arreſt him. As M. de la Salle cannot deny but that he quitted the ſervice of Ruſſia without leave, and as it evidently appears by his papers, which were ſeized, that he was in cloſe intimacy with M. d' Allion, and abſolutely an emiſſary of France, 'tis very much apprehended at Verſailles, that he will receive the puniſhment due to a deſerter and traitor, and that they ſhall hear no more of him, except an account of his execution.

Algiers, April 4. Ibrahim, dey and baſhaw of this regency, died the 5th of February of an apoplectic fit; and Mahomet Choyla Effendi has been elected in his room. The new dey has confirmed all the beys in their reſpective poſts, and ſent embaſſadors to notify his election to the porte.

Dantzick, April 29. The Ruſſian reſident has ſolemnly proteſted againſt the delivering up M. de la Salle's papers to count Unruke, miniſter from the king of Poland, elector of Saxony, who demanded them of the magiſtrates of this city, and has ſent them to Dreſden.

Leghorn, April 8. O. S. We hear from Port Mahone, that they are building there 10 veſſels with oars, in the form of ſmall galliots, which are probably intended to intercept the tranſports ſent continually with troops to Genoa.

Naples, April 17. Seven hundred Spaniſh miquelets and two Swiſs battalions ſet ſail for Genoa the 13th inſtant; but ſoon after a large tranſport run upon the rocks of Gaeta, and all the men in her were drowned.

Rome, April 20. Some time ſince the Pope held a congregation of cardinals, to conſult whether it would not be proper to ſend a miniſter to the congreſs at Aix la Chapelle, to take care that nothing might be done there in prejudice of the rights of the holy See: This queſtion was ſoon decided in the affirmative, as the whole congregation did not forget what paſſed at the congreſs of Munſter 100 years ago, when ſeveral ſecularizations were made in Germany; and in conſequence of their reſolt, his holineſs has nominated M. Jaquet, grand vicar to the prince and biſhop of Liege, for his plenipotentiary at Aix la Chapelle.

LONDON.

May 5. We are aſſured that orders were diſpatched laſt night for diſcharging all the tranſport ſhips in the pay of the government.

We hear that 30 men of war will immediately be paid off, and laid up.

Ferns, March 27. MORRAGH O'MURPHY,
In the 87th Year of my Age.

Extract of a letter from Oxford, dated April 3.

I ſuppoſe I need not tell you that you have got ſome of our young ſparks up to town for drinking the Pretender's health, &c. but this I can aſſure you, that you muſt fetch a good many more, if all the offenders of that ſort are to be puniſh'd; for a behaviour of this kind is as frequent here, as if it was no crime: There are, in ſhort, ſo many profligate youths in this univerſity that it is very dangerous to ſtir out after it is dark. About 8 or 10 days ago, a company of them ſtopp'd a young woman, a Grocer's ſervant, in the ſtreet after dark; and becauſe the girl would not ſuffer them to uſe her juſt as they pleaſed, they dragg'd her about in ſo ſhocking a manner, that they almoſt tore her limbs from her body, and the poor creature, after languiſhing three or four days, died of the hurt ſhe had thereby received. None of the perpetrators of this barbarity are yet diſcovered, nor do I apprehend they ever will. I underſtand there was no body ſaw any thing of the affair but one woman, who at firſt ſaid ſhe knew ſome of the blades, but ſhe now denies that ſhe knows any of them; ſo I ſuppoſe they have ſtopped her mouth.——You ſee how we live at the ſeat of the Muſes.

Oxford, April 7. Laſt monday died of an atrophy, Mr. John Painter, of St. John's College, in this univerſity, and author of the three remarkable letters publiſh'd ſome time ſince, wherein he petition'd for the Favour of having his head ſtruck off in lieu of the late Lord Lovat's. This Gentleman, it ſeems, a little before his death, requeſted of ſome friends who ſat near him, that they would endeavour that his body ſhould not be interr'd near the remains of any of his own relations; but, if Leave could be obtained, that it might be hung in chains on the ſame ſpot of ground where the late Lord Lovat was beheaded, not for any baſeneſs or puſillanimity, with which he declared he could not charge himſelf, and highly diſdained; but for a fatal error in judgment, which he believed he had committed, and which alone had been the cauſe of his deſtruction. He deſired them likewiſe to have him commended, in the beſt manner, to the E. of C———d and Mr. P———m, to whom he thought he owed great obligations; and alſo to the maſter of Lovat, whom he heartily pitied; for, ſaid he, that gentleman is become a double ſufferer, not only a ſufferer thro' his father's folly, but alſo by my own.

London, May 3. On ſaturday three of his majeſty's meſſengers were diſpatched with the preliminary articles of peace, ſealed up in ſilver boxes, to ſeveral foreign courts.

May 10. The Spence ſloop of war is diſpatched, by order of the Lords of the Admiralty, with Expreſſes to the admirals Warren and Hawke, to return to England.

We can aſſure our readers, that Port Lewis coſt the French king one million of pounds ſterling erecting.

NEW-YORK, July 25.

At Boſton they have received almoſt the ſame Intelligences from Europe, as we, both from Plymouth and Liſbon, only the Accounts of the Preliminaries from Liſbon adds, 'that the 'Spaniards have not conſented to the ſaid Articles; ſo that the 'former Acts of Hoſtilities are yet continued againſt them.' And one of the Boſton Papers has the following Addition, 'That ſince the Suſpenſion, Abundance of the Workmen were 'diſcharged from his Majeſty's Yards and Docks, and many of 'the large Men of War unrigg'd and laid up; but that the 'Articles of Peace were not well reliſhed by the People of 'England: And indeed we cannot ſay, that we (in Boſton) 'have ſeen the leaſt Sign of Joy in any one Countenance, 'ſince the Arrival of the News, tho' no Body can ſay but we 'have had our full Share of the War, and ſhould be glad of a 'ſafe and honourable Peace. But Poor New England!——

[This Coldneſs for Peace, it ſeems, is not confined, it ſeems, to New-York alone, where it chagrines many; for all that wiſh well to the Britiſh Intereſt, muſt lament a diſhonourable Peace: And it hence appears, that the Senſe of the preſent Miniſtry, is not the Senſe of the Nation in general. It is ſomewhat ſurprizing, that that Part of the Nation which ſuffers moſt by the War, and who neither gain nor loſe much by the Honour of it, ſhould be more concerned for it than their Leaders! For tho' New-England and New York have had many of their Inhabitants barbarouſly murdered by the Intrigues and Malice of the Enemy, and the latter largely involved in Debt for ſeven Years to come; yet they ſeem univerſally willing, rather to run ſeven Years further, than rejoice at an ignominious Peace; and even the Dutch of New-York themſelves, now ſeem to be aſhamed of the Conduct of their Vaderlandt.——May it not be feared, ſomething is in Agitation like what Dr. Douglaſs of Boſton, ſays in his Summary, Page 8. happened at the Treaty of Utrecht? While the Peace was negotiating, Mr. Moore, of the Board of Trade and Plantations, was ſo barefacedly corrupt, that when the Importance of Cape Breton was repreſented, he anſwered, Muſt the French then have nothing?] New-York Poſt-Boy.

WILLIAMSBURG, July 21.

Extract of a Letter from Barbadoes, to a Gentleman in Williamſburg, dated June 22. 1748.

——I make no Doubt but before this reaches your Hands, you have heard of the Ceſſation of Arms, between Great Britain and France; which the Sheerneſs Man of War was ſent here Expreſs to inform us of; and which was proclaim'd here laſt Thurſday: This, in all Likelihood, will be a Prelude to a Peace, but I am afraid not a laſting one.——About a Fortnight ago, the French homeward bound Fleet ſail'd from Martineco, conſiſting of 42 Sail of Ships; and as our Squadron lay in Readineſs to intercept them, we have had the good Fortune to take no leſs than 18 of them, moſtly rich and valuable Prizes."

On Saturday laſt arrived in Hampton Road, from a Cruize, his Majeſty's Ship Hector, Capt. Maſterſon, and the Otter Sloop, Capt. Ballet, together with their ſix Prizes which they had taken.——The moſt particular Account we can learn of their Cruize, is as follows:

The Otter having taken two French veſſels, trading under Colour of Flags of Truce, and bringing them into Hampton, ſaw a Spaniſh Privateer Schooner, with a Tender and two Prizes, riding at Anchor, within the Capes. Upon which, giving the Privateer a Broadſide, ſhe weigh'd Anchor and put out to Sea. The Otter having ſecured the other Veſſels, immediately purſued her: And meeting the Hector at Sea, who was to Windward of the Privateer, ſhe came down upon her, and took her. The two retaken Veſſels are laden with Rum, &c. from the Weſt-Indies, and conſigned to Capt. Hutchings of Norfolk. We hear that there are on board one of the Flags of Truce, 3000 Pieces of Eight, and 50 Hhds. of Tobacco; and it is ſaid there are Two Caſks of Silver under the Tobacco. The other is laden with Rum and Sugar, and has ſome Money on board.

We have Advice from Briſtol, that the Edinburgh, Ruſſell, arrived in the Downs the 9th of April; and the Indian Queen, Blair, at Dumfries, in 28 Days Paſſage; both from Virginia.
